

COOPER AND WORDSWORTH.

Interview with the Agent of a Few Years Before his Death.

Thomas Cooper, the veteran dramatist, who received a grant of £200 from the State, had, on one occasion, a very interesting interview with Wordsworth at the latter's home at Rydal Mount. Cooper had been at the house and started on a walk through the country.

On the third day after leaving Rydal Mount, Cooper arrived at Rydal Mount, and he was very anxious to see the poet and have a talk with him, but not knowing the poet and having no introduction, was rather doubtful as to the nature of his reception if he went, but, summoning all the courage at his command, he boldly strode up to the door and knocked.

He was told by a servant that Mr. Wordsworth was at home, so he wrote a slip of paper, "Thomas Cooper, of the 'Paragard of Sufferings,' to pay his devoted regards to Mr. Wordsworth." In a very few minutes he was in the presence of the "majestic old man" and was looking with deep interest at the poet's face.

Wordsworth said to him, "How do you do, Mr. Cooper?" and then he said, "I am glad to see you, Mr. Cooper." He then struck Cooper so much in the chest that Cooper's conversation with him was very much interrupted.

A Broom Speaks.

A broom in a parlour swept up a load of brooms, drove his team up before the door of an establishment where he expected to find a purchaser. Arriving from his seat he entered the store and the following colloquy took place:

Yankee—Can't I sell you a load of brooms today, mister?

Duke—No, I don't want any.

Yankee—Better take 'em—sell 'em good cheap.

Duke—Don't want 'em; got enough brooms.

Yankee—I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'll take the lot I'll give you one dollar a dozen. You know they're worth double that.

The dealer stroked his chin for a moment, as if in deep thought, and then replied:

"Well, I don't want any brooms, as I told you, but I don't mind making a trade with you."

Yankee—What sort of a trade?

Duke—Well, I'll take your whole load at one dollar a dozen and pay you one-half cash, you to take the other half in trade.

Yankee—No, you don't mister! You'll change me such an all-fired profit on the other half that I might come out at the little end of the horn.

Duke—Yes, that's right; there's the broom I'll give you to promise you that you shall have the goods just at what they cost me.

Yankee—Well, mister, that's what I call square dealing. It's a bargain.

And he commenced to unload the brooms in a pile on the sidewalk. When he got through he walked into the store.

"There you are, mister! Take that broom which I calculate makes just seven dollars come to me."

Duke—Yes, that's right; there's the money. Now what goods do you want for that broom?

Yankee—Well, I dunno, you see mister, I haven't much posted in your store, so I leave it to you, mister.

The Transition of Electrical Theories.

The question, "What is electricity?" which is often asked, no absolute and satisfactory answer has yet been found. Notwithstanding the wonderful development of electrical science, electricians are still feeling their way as to the nature of the force which is the basis of the operation of the mighty forces that they are learning to control. This was suggested by a remark made by the vice president of the American Institute of electrical engineers at the annual convention of that body.

The speaker claimed that the present theories of electricity are regarded as merely as stepping stones to more comprehensive and satisfactory ones. He contended that modern theories of electrical phenomena, if adopted as the basis of electrical science, would give rise to some of the most important and unexplained phenomena of the world.

JUDGE W. B. FLEMING.
He and Dr. Cottrell Address a Large Crowd of the Unterrified of Cloverport.

Eloquent Words, Facts and Figures Strike Deep into the Hearts of the Unterrified.

A DEMOCRATIC FEAST.

At last there is a little political stir among the Democrats of Cloverport.

Judge W. B. Fleming, of Louisville, and the great crowd of representative Cloverport citizens Monday night and considerable enthusiasm was exhibited.

The Judge is an eloquent and convincing talker, and the powerful argument, as it fell from his lips struck deep into the hearts of the laboring men who listened.

The speaker confined his remarks mostly to the tariff and the force bill. He showed wherein the Republican promises had not materialized; that instead of wages being raised, they had been lowered; that protection did not protect the laboring man, but the man he worked for, it enabled Carnegie to enslave more wealth and give him enough power to drive the men who had made him rich from their employment and fill their places with pauper labor from Europe that came into this country in the name of duty.

It was conclusively shown that the tariff only made the cost of the laboring man's living greater, while it did not effect his wages.

In mentioning the Force bill Judge Fleming referred to the campaign of '76, when by federal interference, the man who was elected was unseated and the man who was not elected was seated.

This force bill a law now, it would be possible for these crimes to be repeated. The Republicans were trying to dodge the issue during the campaign, but Harrison had repeatedly recommended it in his campaign, and he had recommended it in their present platform. Should they ever get full control of the government the force bill would be passed, and then, "God save our beloved country."

When Judge Fleming ceased to talk, Dr. J. B. Cottrell was called to the stand. The fame of this gifted divine is renowned, and when he mounted the rostrum the people expected to hear something grand, and they were not deceived.

For twenty minutes the gifted divine in language flowed from his eloquent lips in a continual stream, and his auditors sat in rapt attention.

He saw his way clear, and he said that except over the country two years ago the beginning of the end of false political economy. His prophetic words are a great upheaval of justice and right; Grover Cleveland embraced all that was grand and pure in statesmanship; no man need be ashamed to walk down the polls in November and cast his ballot for Grover Cleveland. The Doctor closed his remarks amid great cheering.

THE PRATING OF A DISEASED BRAIN.

BALLTOWN, Oct. 19, 1892.

As it is so dry here there has not been happenings to rattle the severity of our little town until we had a good shower of rain this morning enlivening the sweltering and dusty people, and about sundown the population came out to the streets greeting one another.

I went to see what the hub-bub was about and, to my astonishment, found that it was our Victimless Buttery, who had come to make a speech.

About 7 o'clock the store room of Colonel Cannon was crowded with a crowd of twenty-five of the best citizens of the town and surrounding country. Mr. Burton waived the bloody shirt a few times and then demolished the Democratic party and wished that the Democrats were in Hades. In looking around he saw a few civilized Democrats present, and then he took it back and said that he meant the party. He covered more ground in a two-hour's speech than the fastest locomotive could traverse in six weeks. He laughed at the Third party for wanting to have their "ingons" and about two bushels of corn, two bushels of wheat and a great big pumpkin put into a bonnet and worn, and then he went to the government and said they wanted some money. He then told the Pope that he was not in it, "it was no good no law." But in winding up on the poor little bit, I said "I don't know how you all are, but I am going to vote for Tom Cannon."

Mort. Evans is Dead.

W. M. Evans died at his home in Louisville last Thursday at 7:40 p. m.

Mr. Evans had been in bad health for some time, though at the time his death was rather unexpected. He was a prominent tobacco merchant of Louisville, and about three years ago handled tobacco in this city. While here he met and formed an attachment with Miss Maud Wilkinson, which resulted in marriage about two years ago.

The funeral took place here Friday and the funeral took place from the residence of Mrs. Maud Wilkinson at 2 o'clock Monday morning. Mr. Evans was a member of the Knights of Pythias and that order conducted the funeral.

SIR KNIGHTS.
The Geo. E. Currie Division is Instituted at Cloverport.

The Parade and Banquet Attended by a Fair Crowd if Old Rite.

Several unexpected and unlooked for things occurred that had a tendency to mar the pleasure and lessen the attendance at the K. P. ball-room last Saturday, among which was the death and burial of a brother and the inclemency of the weather. Notwithstanding these disadvantages the entertainment may be called a success, as far as its object was concerned, not financially. The George E. Currie division Uniform Rank of Knights was instituted with a membership of 29 charter members, with a prospect of several more in the near future.

Owing to the rainy morning but few people gathered on the picnic grounds before noon and as a consequence but few dinner tickets were sold. Large quantities of nicely barbecued meat lay untouched and was sold at a great sacrifice later in the afternoon. An address of welcome was delivered by Hon. D. R. Murray in his usual good style, though among his words of cheer were mingled those of sadness on the loss of a brother and sympathy for those who mourn the death of a relative. He was followed by General Currie in an interesting speech, explaining the noble and charitable objects of the order. Both addresses were listened to with close attention by about 500 spectators, and many people went away with a more favorable opinion of the K. P. than they had probably entertained before, because they had never given the subject a thought. The Cannonville Club, under the direction of the committee, and it was truly worth listening at. The same band, with a change of instruments, furnished music for the dancing, which was greatly enjoyed by the young people and there were not very young. Upon the whole, the day was pleasantly passed, and everybody hopes that the Knights of Pythias will try it over again when things may be more favorable.

HUDSON.

Mrs. Bennett is on the sick list.

Miss Adelle and Ennie McGill, of this place, have returned home.

There is very much of the weather, though plenty of dry weather and dust.

We are having a good school at this place under the supervision of Miss Carrie Meyer.

Mr. F. Arms, of this place, is visiting his father at Shawaburg, accompanied by his brother from Arkansas.

Mrs. J. P. Lampton and children, Lulu and Frankie, of Harbinger, have returned home after an extended visit at this place.

As this is the first time I ever made an effort to write to you, I hope my letter will not find a great many mistakes.

The hop, given by Mr. J. J. Priest in honor of Miss Adelle and Ennie McGill, was largely attended. About 6 o'clock people began to assemble and by 8 o'clock the hall was thronged with an immense crowd. They danced until the hour of midnight, when they retired to their homes, and the dance at this place fairly groined under its weight, yet whole some burden, of which all partook heartily, then returning to the ball room danced until a late hour.

As I was one of the party, I feel safe in saying that people were not only enjoying well, but were home feeling much elated over the pleasure of a pleasant evening. The music was extremely good, and the dancing was very good, and Mr. G. P. Nottingham for the music and hope that in the near future we may have the pleasure of spending another such an evening.

Card of Thanks.

The postmistress in her dark delusions and fondleings sees nothing but ill as the result of all complications, whether they are conducive to good or evil results.

But while we the members of Breckenridge No. 81, Knights of Pythias of Cloverport Ky., realize the great disadvantages under which the affairs of our brotherhood are conducted, we bow in meek submission to the rulings of the Grand Chancellor Commander of the Universe, knowing that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." We rejoice in the fact that the result of the combined disadvantages brought to bear against us, was the establishment of a new branch in this city. And while we rejoice, we do not lead so far as to misconceive the cause of the favorable result, but attribute it greatly to the aid and support we received from the citizens of Cloverport, to whom we extend our heartfelt thanks.

And especially are we grateful to the wives of our Brother Knights for the unceasing and unflinching efforts manifested in our behalf, also we are grateful to Mr. John N. S. Long and Samuel Hall for the opportunity and mainly way they extended to us their helpful hands.

NOT COMPROMISED.

Rev. Dennis Brings Suit Against the P. C. & St. L. for Damages for His Injuries

$25,000 the Amount Wanted

Rev. Geo. W. Dennis, who was run over several months ago by the steam car at Fourteenth and Chestnut, brought suit to day in Common Pleas against the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company for $25,000 damages.

The petition recited that on June 23 last, he was lawfully traveling on the streets of this city and that the defendant was unlawfully running a train on Fourteenth street and carelessly ran him over at the intersection with Chestnut street, cutting off both his legs and one of his arms. It is claimed that the defendant never had any legal authority to use Fourteenth street.

Julius E. F. Buckner is the attorney for the plaintiff. The impression has existed that this claim has been compromised upon very liberal terms—Louisville Post.

It is not unusual for colds contracted in the fall to hang on all winter. In such cases catarrh or chronic bronchitis are almost sure to result. A fifty cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will cure any cold. Can you afford to risk so much for so small an amount? This remedy is intended especially for bad colds and croup and can always be depended upon. For sale by A. B. Fisher, Druggist.

Three hundred dollars worth of new hats and boys' boots carried over last winter by the Cash Store at Bewleyville, Ky., now in stock, in good order and offered at cost to close out the season.

Joe Gray (colored) shot his wife near Germantown last Saturday night. Joe has not been out of the penitentiary but for some weeks. He is now with his wife considerably in the estimation of those who judged to secure his pardon. No cause was assigned for the deed, except that he learned his wife refused to go and live with him, for this he drew his pistol and shot her. He left the county as soon as he committed the crime and has not been heard of at this writing. Gray is a bad negro and will die at the end of a rope.
